

🕒 YEAR 2100

REPAINT

The world never lost its colour — people just stopped seeing it.

A 2D game about finding the magic hidden in the everyday.

01 THE BRIEF

See an everyday routine or object in a completely new way.

Find the magic, the humour, and the meaning hidden in the mundane — the moments and objects we walk past every day without a second glance.

OUR ANSWER

A game where you paint the duller things in your world — and watch the colour, and the memory already inside them, come rushing back.

Painting isn't decoration. It's remembering.

A world drained grey

By 2100 the colour has bled out of everything. Nobody looks closely anymore.

A magic paintbrush

Hidden in a forgotten artist's workshop. One brushstroke brings a place back to life.

Your own memories

Every painted object reveals a memory from the player's OWN life — the meaning was always there.

03 OPENING CUTSCENE

A life drained of colour.

We watch one person grow up at the same window, 2060 to 2100. With every stage the world outside loses a little more colour — until it's grey, and so are they.

"Everyone is living the same old boring routine every single day — and people start to struggle with finding the meaning to life."

One crack. One flower. One brush.

The flower

A single bloom pushes through a pavement crack — the only colour left.

The alley

Its petals lead to a hidden alley and a faded mural no one has found.

The workshop

Touch the mural and the wall cracks open: a lost artist's studio.

The brush

One paintbrush still glows. He lifts it — and colour bursts across the city.

"Somewhere along the way, people stopped looking closely. Days were just hectic blurs, and nobody paid attention anymore."

Switch the scene. Find the one thing. Bring it back.

1

Explore

Tap left / right to move between five 2D panels of your own life.

2

Paint

Each scene hides one mundane object. Paint it and the whole scene blooms into colour.

3

Remember

A memory plays — and you see that the place was never really boring at all.

THE PANEL VIEW

grey → painted

City · Cafe · House · Beach · School

Every object holds a piece of your life.

City

Paint: An office door

Memory: Your excited first day at work

Cafe

Paint: A table by the window

Memory: The first date with your wife

Childhood room

Paint: A plush in the corner

Memory: Hugging it to sleep as a kid

Beach

Paint: A beach umbrella

Memory: Your secondary-school class party

School

Paint: A classroom desk

Memory: Country-erasers with classmates

All your own

Paint: Every memory is YOURS

Memory: You see your life in a new way

On New Year 2101, the last colour vanishes — forever.

The brush turns reflection into a mission. Restore each scene and you slow the countdown — purpose and urgency for a quiet, thoughtful game.

each restored scene = more time on the clock

2060 ————— 2100 ——— 2101

Glittering eyes. A playback of every memory you brought back.

"Life isn't boring. It just depends on the way you see it. Happiness lies in our everyday routines and items, waiting for you to discover it."

"The world never lost its colour. People just failed to see it."

...the screen fades to black, and one last question appears →

A grey world, painted back one scene at a time.

Art

- Hand-drawn 2D, panel-by-panel exploration
- Inspired by Video Studio Escape's framed scenes
- Desaturated grey → full colour on each paint reveal

Sound

- A melancholic, lonely theme to open
- Lifts to warm and hopeful the moment you paint
- Music carries the emotional arc, kept simple

How we built it.

The idea

We started from a feeling: life turning into a grey, repeating blur. Colour became the obvious metaphor — a world that lost it because people stopped looking, and a brush that reveals the meaning already there.

The challenge

Making “see the mundane differently” actually playable, giving a quiet reflective game real stakes, and stopping five scenes from feeling repetitive.

How we solved it

We fused theme and mechanic — painting unlocks YOUR memory. The 2101 countdown adds urgency, and each scene gets its own object, memory and emotional beat.

Future developments:

More memories

Larger
exploration space

Different tasks for each year / level

Added real memories collected from people
all over the world

A decorative graphic consisting of nine colored dots of various sizes and colors (red, orange, teal, purple, blue, pink) arranged in a loose, abstract pattern at the top of the image.

It's now your turn to find the colour in your life.

REPAINT